Educational leaders have tremendous energy for helping all children achieve high levels of success. Effective leaders know they cannot reach this goal without a clear vision and goals and staff that function as a professional learning community to create the capacity to do the work. This series of three (3) hands-on design workshops provides administrators with the opportunity to examine their professional development needs in the context of their vision and their school goals and settings.

March 9—Session 2: Facilitated by Nancy Jacobs/Terry Weingrod
How can we take Next Generation Learning into our classrooms now?

- ◆ Review the nuts and bolts of creating a well functioning leadership team.
- ◆ Determine key players needed on the team.
- ◆ Design shared leadership responsibilities and opportunities.
- ◆ Identify the roles and responsibilities of team members.
- ◆ Determine a team meeting structure complete with potential agenda items.
- ◆ Learn how to create productive structures and meetings.
- ◆ Work with decision making tools and processes including decision making models.
- ◆ Clarify the difference between a team decision vs. what is advisory.
- ◆ Learn how to move the work of a leadership team out to the entire staff.

May 2—Session 3: Facilitated by Nancy Jacobs/Terry Weingrod
How can we lead our schools to Next Generation Learning?

- ◆ Review and discuss the latest work on key elements of successful leadership and creating a professional learning community in your school.
- ◆ Strengthen and refine your vision.
- ◆ Use a structured process to determine educational priorities based on your vision.
- ◆ Design a plan to create a (or strengthen an already existing) leadership team.
